HUDSON ORIGINS

In early England a man was known by but one name. When surnames first came into use, Richard the son of Roger was known as Richard Fitz-Roger, Fitz being a corruption of the Latin, filius, or son. The nickname of Roger was Hodge, and the son of Roger became Hodgson, Hodson or Hudson, and Richard Fitz-Roger became Richard Hudson, the name of our first ancestor in America.

In the opinion of English genealogists, the early ancestors of the Hudson family came into England with William the Conqueror in 1066. They were a numerous family, and the names of Richard, John, Henry and William were repeated to the point of confusion.

Henry Hudson, Gentleman, was an Alderman of London. He had acquired wealth in trade and was the Lord of a number of Manors, some of which had been conferred upon him by King Henry VIII for service to the Crown. He died in 1555, and was buried in the Church of St. Dunstons.

Another Henry Hudson, thought to be the son of Alderman Hudson, was a founder and director of the Muscovy Company, probably the father of Henry Hudson, the Explorer, who made two of his first voyages for the Muscovy Company. After the Explorer, and his son, John, had lost their lives at sea, his wife, Katherine apprenticed another son, Richard, to the Company. He served in India and died there in 1648. There was another son, Oliver.

Places of residence and repetition of family names indicate that Alderman Hudson had another son, William, married to Alice Turner, whose son, Richard, was baptized in the ancient Church of St. Editha, Tamworth, Staffordshire, on November 5, 1608. Later he appeared in the register of the Church of St. Mary Aldermary in London, together with records of Oliver Hudson, son of Henry, the Explorer. This Richard had a brother named Nicholas.

RICHARD HUDSON was born in England in 1608, died in Northampton County (formerly Accomac County), Virginia in the fall of 1659, leaving an oral will. He was married in 1638 to Mary Hayes, and married, second, in 1652 to Barbara Jacob. By the first marriage there were two known children, Nicholas and Henry; there was a third son, probably John.

Richard first appears in 1634 in the records of Accawmacke, a County of Virginia at the tip of the peninsula off Chesapeake Bay, and known as the Eastern Shore. The records of Accawmacke are the oldest continuous records in America, in some twenty unindexed volumes, the pages worn and mutilated with age, and the peculiar early Colonial script all but illegible.

In Accawmack Orders, Wills and Deeds 1632-1640, Vol. I, page 19, Richard Hudson sued Mrs. Savage, and the Court ordered her to pay him 600 pounds of tobacco and five barrels of corn for "his servis". Eighty pounds of tobacco were worth one pound Sterling and a day's wage was sixteen pounds of tobacco, about a dollar. The standard of money value was in common commodities of trade.

His pay would represent at least three months work, if his "servis" were constant, and as the date of the suit was February 19, 1634/35, it would indicate that Richard arrived in America at least by the fall of 1634, a free workman without indebtedness.

Men often borrowed money for passage, and worked a number of years as indentured servants to pay off the debt. Richard came as a "headright" of Obedience Robbins, Justice of the Accomac Court. The man who induced another to come to America received fifty acres of land for each such "headright".

In the County of Accomac the streams were teeming with fish, the Bay was filled with oysters long known to the Indians, and game was abundant. There was probably little hunger. Residents had trade with the Puritans of Boston, exchanging tobacco for firearms, beer and whisky, then as now considered to be the prime necessities of civilized life.

Life must have been rugged, and at times very dull. Records are filled with trivial accusations of theft, slander and trouble over various kinds of essential property, such as pigs, chickens, calves and corn. It seems that most of the charges were without proof, and often the Court took no action. When bickering was prolonged to the point of nuisance, the Court often subjected both sides to the humiliation of public punishment.

Interest and entertainment emanated from the practice of taking every trivial complaint into Court. Justice of a sort was meted out with the same emphasis, the occasion usually being on Sunday at the time of "devine service". That was the time when wrongdoers were set in stocks, or given numbered lashes on the back. There was an entry about a man whose dog killed a calf down by the swamp, and they hanged the dog to clear the debt.

Goodwiffe Robins was brought into Court for slandering Mary Hudson. The Court ruled "It is fitt and so ordered that Sampson Robins shall have twenty lashes on the back and pay all costs of suyte. It is ordered that Alice Robins, his wife, shall have twenty lashes on the back." Evidently it was the responsibility of a man to see that his wife kept a decent tongue in her head.

Alice Robins had a penchant for vile talk and received about every punishment in the book. For another slander she was lashed "to the end of a canow and towed over the creeke".

The Court records a deposition of Richard Hudson concerning the "stealing of his corne". Other records refer to his owning land on Hungars Creek, and his jury duty July 5, 1643. In 1642 he appeared in Court against John Foster for possession of a hog, claiming that the mark of a flower deluce had been cut out of the hog's ear. There was a Deed of Gift:

Know all men by these presents that I Richard Hudson of Accomack in ye County of North in Virginia doe by these my Act and Deed freely and Vallentarylie give & deliver possession unto my well beloved wife Barbara Hudson & her heirs or Assigns forever one Red Cowe Cropt in both its Eares and a flower deluce in Each Eare and a Slitt under its Right Eare which is a proper mark from my owne and ye Redd Cow and all her increase to be freely at her own dispose for to give or sell without any Lett or hindorence by me Richard Hudson as witness my hand this 9th of July 1658

In a list of over 600 live stock marks in Maryland Archives LIV, pp 749-53, appear those of Henry and Nicholas Hudson, sons of Richard, and three others of related families, each having a

"flower deluce in each ear", indicating that this was the Hudson mark, with slits, holes or notches to distinguish branches of the family. The flower deluce was the official insignia of the Hudson family from very early times.

Elroy M. Avery's History of the United States, Vol. II, p. 82, shows a coat of arms of Henry Hudson, the Explorer, with the fleur-de-lis as a dominant feature.

HENRY HUDSON, son of Richard, was born in Accomac County, Va., about 1642. His will was proven May 23, 1710 in Somerset County, Maryland (Book 13, Folio 41). During his life he had sailed his boats, sold or traded and acquired land, moved from swampy to sandy soil and better farms, and found more civil and religious freedom on land administered by William Penn.

Sir William Penn (1621-1670) of the family of Bristol seamen and merchants, was instrumental in returning King Charles II to the throne of England, was made an Admiral, and the King incurred a debt to him of some 16,000 pounds. His son, William Penn, (1644-1718) accepted in lieu of the money, an extensive tract of land in America lying west of the Delaware where he proposed to form a colony for the peoples of all nations, free from ancient traditions, prejudice and intolerance. There men might begin a new way of life. The Colony was granted in 1681 and was called Pennsylvania.

Immediately there arose a dispute between Lord Baltimore and Penn as to the exact dominion controlled by Penn on the lower Delaware. The principal controversy centered about the location of Cape Henlopen, which was at one time the point of land where the present line of Delaware meets the ocean. In 1682 Penn gave this point the name of Cape James, Cape Henlopen being changed to the point which now bears that name. The territory between, a large part of Sussex County, was claimed by both.

Final settlement was not reached until 1775, the controversy disturbing the peace for nearly a century. The Hudson families were in the midst of it.

Ultimately the engineers Mason and Dixon completed the survey and determined the final line. John Watson, a surveyor for the Penns, in December 1750, wrote in his diary:

"The line now being extended to large morasses at the head of the Pocomoke River, which are covered with Waters of Great Depth. This day was very tempestuous and a little after 12 at noon the Tide was to a very great hight. Our Creatures were in very eminent danger . . . the Settlers often losing 20 to 30 head of their Cattle thereby . . the lands are level, arable, fit and pleasant for Creatures almost all of the year.

"January 9, 1751. Hard weather had frozen the Marshes and the head of Cinapuxon Bay over so hard that it bore us to walk over the Ice & we continued our Course abt a mile & a half. Past the House of George Hudson, leaving the same about 55 yds Nward.

"January 10. This morning we entered into a thick swamp, extremely full of Brush and these hung with green briars. About one half a Mile past the House of Wm Hudson about 60 pers on the south side of the line and by the House of Absalom Hudson on the north side of the line at about the same distance therefrom.

"January 10. Continued the line about one Mile and a Half through two very thick swamps, frozen over, otherwise impassible, deep, wet and full of Water. Left off at Deep Creek, otherwise Miller's Creek, being a branch of Cinapuxon Sound. Past the House of David Hudson a little before we left off, leaving the same about 6 perches to the Southward of the line, and his new House about three times as far to the Northward." (Perches or pers, meant poles or rods.)

One of the surveyors, drying his boots by the fire, awoke to find the leather badly charred and shrunken. It was necessary for him to wrap his feet and suspend work while another of the crew made the long trip by horseback to Philadelphia (now covered in minutes on a superhighway) for new boots. In the interim a thaw nearly marooned him and imperiled his life.

Abandoning the job in bad weather, the surveyors went back toward Philadelphia and passed "one Continuous tract of incomparable fine land. If people thrive not here, it must be owing to their own Misconduct".

The Hudsons named here were children and grandchildren of Henry, who died in 1710. In his will he named his wife, and left to five sons (among his ten children) over 2,000 acres of land. His dwelling plantation, named "Mentmore", 441 acres, was left to John and Jonathan, providing that if either should die without "heirs of his body lawfully begotten", it all go to the other.

JOHN HUDSON, son of Henry, was born about 1685, his will proven April 12, 1770. Tracing back from the present time we were searching for the father of a Joshua Hudson who had a son Ananias. There was a John Hudson in Sussex County who qualified but who was he and who was his father? There were sixteen men by the name of John Hudson, with no middle initial. We had already eliminated fifteen John Hudsons, by wills, land transactions, or by Court Records. There remained only John of "Mentmore". But he had vanished from the records, was buried under sixty years of silence, and there was a state line and forty miles of wilderness separating the plantation "Mentmore" from the land described in the will of John Hudson of Sussex County.

After days of torturing our eyes reading faded script, and searching through unindexed records, we had decided that perhaps it didn't matter after all -- and had gone down to the ocean for a little of the relaxation we had promised ourselves on the trip to the Eastern Shore. Then it began to rain.

There was one more chance. So we headed for Princess Anne, the seat of Old Somerset County, whose early records covered the entire area up to the time of division to form Worcester County. And there was the record, the "wagon tracks through the wilderness" tracing John of "Mentmore" in his move to the north.

Under date of August 7, 1742, John Hudson then of "Sussex County in the territory of Pensilvania" sold through John Purnall his attorney, 441 acres, all the lands on the seaboard known as "Mentmore", for 100 pounds. In 1742 he signed the deed and the receipt with his distinctive mark, a long capital I with a cross bar in the middle. The same mark appeared on his will in Sussex County in 1770, his hand then quavery with illness and age.

Witness Joseph Truitt Senr

Witness Margaret Fisher

John Hudson

Witness John Truitt

Memorandum the 12th day of April 1770 Joseph Truitt Senr and John Truitt two of the witnesses to the within will subscribing appeared before me Phillips Kollock Registrar appointed for the probate of wills and granting letters of administration for the County of Sussex on Delaware (and being of the people called Quakers who for Conscience Sake Could not take an oath) did on their solemn affirmation respectively affirm that in their sight presence and hearing the Testator John Hudson did sign seal publish pronounce and declare the within written to be his Last Will and Testament and that at the doing thereof the said Testator was of sound and disposing mind memory and judgment and that they and each of them together with Margaret Fisher subscribed the same as witnesses at the request and in the presence of the Testator.

The account of the Executor was simple, including little other than probate costs; one pound, ten shillings paid to Rev. John Lyon for preaching the funeral sermon; three pounds, seventeen shillings, sixpence paid to Luranah, daughter of Ananias, "a legacy of half a still devised to her father". As was often done, the property had been given long before, and the will had been drawn to serve as the only legal record of the property.

Tracing legal records is not a simple matter; and even today there are many states without an adequate index. A deed may or may not be recorded. If a sale is made by Court approval, the Court record is adequate; if sold under contract, a Recognizance Docket is the full record. In the absence of Title Records, a patent, grant or proprietary warrent is often the only source.

Vital statistics are a recent requirement. Except for the records of churches, there are few old records of birth, death, or marriage. There are census and military records, and Court records, guardian accounts and tax lists - usually unindexed, in faded script, incomplete because of destruction by war and fire.

And some records are unintelligible after the passage of the years. One parcel of land was described, as was the common practice, as "Beginning at a Double Walnut Stump, thence running S 88 W one hundred and four poles to a white pine on a high rock on the side of the said Creek, thence up the several courses and Meanderings of the said Creek and Binding thereon to two ashes and an Ironwood standing on the bank of the said Creek" and so on from stump to sapling to the beginning. From the high rock, it was possible to approximately reconstruct the layout.

The tracing of any name down the generations involves a very great variety of spellings. People then read little and wrote less. The inability to spell or write reflected lack of actual necessity more than lack of intelligence or ability. Phonetic spelling indicates a dialect we would understand with difficulty.

In tracing my Hamacher ancestors, I found the name spelled in over a dozen ways. In Virginia it is pronounced Haymaker and often so spelled. Such variations do not include the ingenuity of a Captain of the "Melishey" who started to write the slurred phonetic sound as he heard it, Hammerer, and when the ink dried on his quill, finished it just plain Hammer.

Added to the confusion of spelling is the number of people of the same name. There were countless Hudsons, some from New England; there was a William Hudson who was Mayor of Philadelphia in 1725; many from other parts of Virginia, whence some had gone to Georgia, others to found the town of Hudson, Florida, while others, "raised among slaves but convinced of its evil", left to go to Jennings County, Indiana, and settle near our family. If any of these are related, the connection is farther back than our earliest research.

But people who consider this research important often leave valuable records. Such a one was Millard Hudson, (1861-1937), who sought for over forty years to establish a connection between Richard Hudson, son of Henry the Explorer, and the Richard Hudson of Accomac. By records not available to him, I learned of the death of the former in India.

Henry Hudson, brother of John, married Ellis Dennis, and his line descended through Henry, Dennis, Thomas, Joshua and William to Millard F. Hudson. Henry's line also descended through still another William and another Dennis to Eli, Benjamin, Aaron, John and Lawrence to Dollie Hudson, (Mrs. Vaughn C. Upp) of Portland, Indiana, who made available the records of Millard F. Hudson.

JOSHUA HUDSON, son of John, was born about 1730, died 1774, intestate. His wife did not survive him. There were four children, Esther and Henry over fourteen, Joshua and Ananias, twins, age three.

The Guardian was Henry Hudson, brother of Joshua. The land could not be divided without spoiling the farm, so the 133 acres were appraised and sold in 1778 to Silvester Deputy who two years earlier had married Esther and assisted her in completing the administration of Joshua's estate.

In 1777 Uncle Henry had paid out for each Ananias and his brother Joshua a pound and a half for "Anoculating for smallpox" and his final report Aug. 9, 1793 showed that he had given to the children unsparingly, made possible a good education and trained them for business. When Ananias reached age 21, he received over 41 pounds Sterling, the residue of his share of the estate. He had added money from his own funds to close the estate of Joshua, who had died before reaching maturity.

Here in the Lower Counties of Pennsylvania, later the first State in the Union, Delaware, named for Thomas West, Lord De la Warr, the Provincial Governor of Virginia from 1609 to 1618, the generations of Hudsons were farming the "incomparable fine land", and finding a large measure of the good life, in search of which their ancestors had left the Old World.

This period of time shows few personal records. But there are other items of interest revealed by the search. The value of a day's work had increased from sixteen to twenty-four pounds of tobacco. And in 1766 a tax of 31 pounds of tobacco on each of 3,823 inhabitants was paid into a fund for charity and public works, such as bridges and improved roads.

And it is observed that about the middle of the century the names began to vary from the old English pattern to Bible names. In the Colonies, loyalty to the Crown had waned, and the world was in the grip of a religious revival following the spearhead of John and Charles Wesley, whose ministry had started in England in 1739 and continued to spread for over fifty years.

It was during the time of John and Joshua Hudson that other significant and far reaching changes were taking place in both the Old World and the New. In 1710, Coenraad Gerlach (Conrad Carlock) arrived in New York from Holland, having fled there from persecution in the Palatinate. In 1740 Adam Hamacher arrived at the Port of Philadelphia, from the same region, by a more direct course.

The Palatinate was a division of Germany west of the Rhine. Its inhabitants descended from the ancient Germanic tribes, the Franks, who, under King Chlodowig had conquered the Allemanni in the year 496 A.D. and occupied the land.

Long after the Empire of Charlemagne had been divided and before Prussia had arisen to unify the political segments, there were over two hundred cities, kingdoms, grand duchies, bishoprics and principalities governed by overlords whose power was absolute and whose individual whim might shape the religious and economic life of the inhabitants. One archbishop to rid his domain of heretics, issued an edict ordering them to leave within ten days.

The area had always been the battlefield of Europe and after each war the inhabitants had to rebuild homes, replant trees and fields, and slowly reestablish their herds.

Many fled to Holland and the British Isles, but nowhere was there full religious freedom and economic opportunity. More and more, those who had the means and the courage, started the long, and perilous journey to the Colonies in America.

But crossing the Atlantic was far from being a pleasure trip on a luxury liner. The crossing took from three to five months. The average sailing vessel was not over a hundred feet long and twenty-odd feet beam, with passengers crowded on two small decks. During storms which often lasted several days, they were all shut below with hatches and port holes closed. Deaths were numerous, especially of small children.

When they had eaten the food they brought with them, there was only the ship's fare, long lying in salt, and water that was foul smelling. And they were subjected to constant fear of other ships, privateers under any disguise, slave hunters, ships from enemy countries and men-of-war in search of seamen.

After a generation or two in the New World, other economic problems arose. There was congestion along the eastern seaboard. Henry Hudson had divided his 2,000 acres of land among his sons, his married daughters moving onto land inherited or acquired by their husbands. There was always the need for more land, and it became scarcer and more costly. There were no super-markets or shopping centers; they had to produce for every need. The only solution was to move on to unoccupied territory. John Hudson had moved north to Cedar Creek Hundred, in Sussex County. The term Hundred, equivalent to township, was an area considered able to support ten families with an average of ten in each family.

Once the land east of the mountains was occupied, the next expansion was to the Shenandoah Valley, opened to permit the new occupants to form a buffer between the east and the Indians who were causing concern on the "western frontier". But the Valley soon became crowded, also.

The period from 1795 to 1802 was one of general prosperity, and everywhere new roads made land accessible, there were soaring prices. To get land at a fair price, a half million settlers had already gone to the wilderness area west of the mountains, in the virgin lands of Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio. What is now Kentucky, was then a County of Virginia which extended from the seaboard to the Mississippi River, with no western limit.

There were two principal migration routes to the "far west". Settlers moved on down the Valley, following what is now Route 11 and up through the Cumberland Gap into Tennessee and Kentucky. This was the route explored by Daniel Boone, and followed by the Lincoln family, the Noakes, Carlock, Hamacher, Randall, Stewart, Wright and Deputy families. The route across the mountains to Morgantown and Parkersburg, then down the Ohio River to Madison, was followed by the Hudson and Willey families.

"Marry a man with an itching foot and a girl is bound to have anxieties. It was the common lot of pioneer women. Better to go and share it with him. Marry your man and follow him. Bear his children. Feed him. Watch his cattle. Lend a hand with the farm at need. Milk, churn, weave, sew. Mold his bullets. Load his rifles when the shooting is rapid enough to demand it. Beat off the Indians yourself if need be. Watch your husband set out again and again into the forest with death or torture or captivity always a prospect."

ANANIAS HUDSON was born in Sussex County, near Milford, Delaware, May 7, 1771, died in Indiana August 29, 1852. He was married at Morgantown, Va. (later W. Va.) to Magdalin Willey, born June 2, 1771, died February 7, 1841. Ananias was married, second, May 10, 1841, to Elizabeth Layton.

Magdalin Willey was a daughter of Absalom Willey, born May 6, 1739, died December 19, 1791, married March 14, 1763, to Margaret ----, born Nov. 14, 1741, died (will proven Jan. 3, 1816).

The Delaware Archives (Vol. 2, pp 773-775) in the Diary of Captain Thomas Rodney, lists Absalom Willey as one of the Company of thirty-five men who "joined in the expedition against Bordentown (Decemoer 25, 1776) which was abandoned after the troops accomplished a perilous crossing of the Delaware. Reached Allentown after four days of forced marching, in which they had only six hours sleep. From thence they marched to Trenton and joined the regular troops under Gen. Washington in time to take part in the famous nocturnal retreat from the place and capture of Princeton next day.

After Washington's defeat at New York in the fall of 1776, he was driven across New Jersey to the tragic crossing of the Delaware. There they rallied and on Christmas night 1776, they recrossed the Delaware from the Pennsylvania side at Trenton and in house to house fighting defeated the British in one of the three major decisive battles of the Revolution.

Margaret Willey, widow of Absalom, filed her will in 1816 in Monongalia County (Morgantown) Va., naming Magdalin and Ananias. A history of the County traces the line from William Willey, the brother of Absalom, to Waitman T. Willey, member of the Constitutional Convention of Virginia, and after the division, of West Virginia. He was once a candidate for Governor, and served as United States Senator from Virginia in the time of Lincoln, and later from West Virginia to 1871.

In 1811, Ananias and Magdalin, with their children, moved down the Ohio River to Madison, destined to be a thriving river terminal in the southern Indiana Territory. In 1812 they moved to a farm on Coffee Creek in Jennings County. Here he operated a tanning business for a number of years, and taught his sons the business.

January 11, 1838 Ananias Hudson, then age 66, sold 160 acres of the home place to his son Absalom; and August 10, 1844 Absalom deeded an acre of it to the Trustees of the Christian Church for a church building and a cemetery. On the sunny side of this hill Ananias and Magdalin lie buried.

The migrations to Indiana were not the end of the trek to the west. Each family has its own traditions. The winter that Tunis House Carlock and some of his sons went to Kansas, part of them lived in dugouts until better shelters were ready. Randall and Wright families moved to Minnesota, built their homes in the midst of Indian troubles. Others went by the Oregon Trail to the Northwest; still others to Washington and California, during the Gold Rush and in all of the generations following.

Life then was still primitive. The plumbing system at its best was a well and possibly a cistern with pumps. Light was by kerosene lamps, when not by candle. The wood burning range was far from automatic. Even as late as 1905, I delivered Jersey milk to neighbors at four cents a quart, and store bread, if any, was a nickel a loaf. Eggs were half a cent each, and chickens were six cents a pound.

Born in the age of the horse and buggy, a little before the turn of the century, it has been my privilege to share and to appreciate the spirit of these pioneers, and to realize that simplicity of living does not always imply hardship.

My grandmother was a Civil War widow at the age of eighteen, and her two sons forfeited the college education their father had and planned for them. But my parents did not consider theirs a lost generation. Theirs was a full and rich life which may be difficult of achievement by those later twigs on the family tree, sprouting in this era of gadgets which we call "the atomic age".

It is with the purpose of helping to understand them as our own people, and of perpetuating the memory of all who lived in these past generations, that this work is recorded.

Much preliminary genealogical research is based on more or less speculative assumption; then is either proven or discarded. In proving our line, we accumulated irrelevant records that are not proven, but may be of help to others as a starting point for research. The following is, in part, a speculative tabulation.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Every effort has been made to avoid and eliminate errors, but probably nothing can be perfect. Some parts of the record are still incomplete; and others will be changed before they can be printed. Someone may have died, others been married or changed address or occupation. And there are always new babies.

The pages are printed on one side to allow space for noting new data, births, marriages or deaths, and for pencil notations of changes of address. If the record is kept of each family and of those related, it will be comparatively easy for someone to issue a new record in some later generation.

In the index, married women are listed by their married name, not the maiden name. Some unrelated families or individuals who are referred to in parentheses for some point of interest, may not be indexed.

The numerals at the left of the following pages indicate the generation of the individual, starting with

- 1 Richard Hudson
- 2 Henry Hudson
- 3 John Hudson
- 4 Joshua Hudson
- 5 Ananias Hudson
- 6 The eight children of Ananias - Margaret, Joshua, Absalom, Boyd, Sarah, William, Esther, James. All number 7s are their children; number 8s their grandchildren, and so on.

Some of the 12th generation, following a series of first-born or of early marriages, may be the same age as others of the 11th generation, just as some may be younger than their aunts or uncles.

- 7 Salena Hudson b. 1829, d. 1851, m. 2-14-1850 Allen Hill, Bap.
Minister, b. 1-10-1831, d. 8-4-1898; by his 2nd marriage
2-24-1856 to Elizabeth Malcolm, Allen Hill had Belle, Albert
Rowland (m. Dora Hudson p. 65), James and John Hill. He was 4th of a line of ministers starting with Thomas Hill b. 1763, then Allen, Thomas and Allen. He was Capt. of Co. H., 27th
Infantry in the Civil War. Flora McBride King of the Deputy Family, now 92, whose vivid memory has added much to this record, tells that before Salena died, she asked Allen never to remarry. He said: "If I always feel as I do now, I never will." Evidently he did not always feel the same.

Sylvester W. Deputy, farmer, born 1-3-1835, died 5-8-1895

At the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893, in the Delaware State Building was an old Hominy Mortar, with an inscription stating "It has been in the possession of the family of the present owner 200 years. Made of an oak tree that grew in Wales, and brought to this country by a family named Deputy about 1658." The Deputy family was in territory acquired by William Penn, and April 8, 1741 Sylvester Deputy received from Thomas Penn a warrant of 350 acres of land in Milford District, Cedar Creek Hundred, Sussex County, now Delaware, then one of the Lower Counties of Pennsylvania. Sylvester's son Solomon was father of still another Sylvester Deputy who married Esther Hudson, sister of Ananias Hudson. The line of Sylvester and Esther Deputy descends through Henry to Sylvester W. Deputy, husband of Sarah Hudson; through Andrew to Joshua Deputy, the husband of Eliza Davis (p. 71), daughter of Esther Ann Hudson. (The historian of the Deputy Family is Mrs. Louis H. Osterman, 901 Garden Avenue, Seymour, Indiana.)

6 James Ananias Hudson born 1811, died before 8-28-1834 when Allen Hill and Ananias Hudson Sr. were appointed administrators of his estate. There was a sale of his goods and a guardian was appointed for his child, indicating that his wife did not survive him. Names on the vouchers in final settlement of his estate included Cynthia Hudson, of whom this is the only known record. There is another Jennings County Court record on 2-14-1842 showing "Allen Hill, guardian of the person and estate of Artemisia Hudson, infant heir of Ananias Hudson, deceased." A son of Joshua Hudson, also named James Ananias Hudson, also had a daughter named Artemisia, born about 1860. (p. 23).

All that was known of this family when Thompson Hudson made a report at the family reunion in 1892, was that James A. Hudson married "a Miss McCreary".
